Slim Fit. Perlick has introduced what it says are the world's first 15-inch refrigerated drawers. They come with stainless-steel interiors and full-extension slides and either stainless-steel and insulated-glass fronts or a wood overlay kit that helps them blend with cabinetry. Together, the drawers measure 34 inches high and 24 inches deep and cost $3,000.

Flex Space. With Ariston's 36-inch refrigerated drawers, the emphasis is on flexibility. Features include removable storage bins, separate temperature zones for upper and lower drawers, and stainless-steel containers for foods with strong odors. The two-drawer unit has a total capacity of 6 cubic feet and fits in an opening 33 inches high and 35¹/₂ inches wide. Designed for installation in custom cabinetry, it costs $2,500; optional stainless-steel front panels are another $700.
